Dear Aidan,

Thanks very much for your email! Yes, I've made a New Year's resolution too – to get fit!

You know my brother is a sports teacher? Well, he's worked out a training programme for me and a new diet!

First of all, I (1) _____ for 20 minutes every weekday before school around the park next to our flat. Then I (2) _____ 20 lengths of my local swimming pool on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. And, finally, I (3) _____ to a yoga class on Saturday mornings.

Luckily he's not too strict and I (4) _____ anything on Sundays, which is great! I (5) _____ my diet because I eat quite well but he says I (6) _____ any chocolate or cakes. That's hard because you know I love sweet things!

I'm going to try for 3 months. You'll see a new me!

Love,

Katia

"Este libro es más divertido que el libro que leímos el año pasado" dijo Manuel cuando lo terminó. Era un libro grande, rojo, antiguo y guay y lo tuvimos que leer para la asignatura de inglés antes de las Navidades. La protagonista era una chica de 20 años. Su nombre era Sara y estaba estudiando matemáticas en la Universidad de Oxford. Aunque no era inglesa, tenía que hablar inglés todo el tiempo porque sus aventuras pasaron en un pueblo donde nadie sabía hablar otro idioma.

Pensé que había encontrado un buen amigo y ayudante, y estaba muy emocionado cuando nos acercábamos al gran barco, lleno de marineros ocupados y ruidosos... “Él debe de estar realmente orgulloso de ti. Tú eres un gran jugador de jockey y tú siempre tienes unos resultados excelentes en los exámenes.” “Tú no sabes nada, Jenny. Él era bueno en los exámenes y en el deporte también.

37 Read the text. What is the writer's attitude toward rehabilitation of prisoners?

Many people believe that rehabilitation of prisoners should be a large part of any country's prison system. Research shows that prisoners that have had little or no rehabilitation go on to commit more crimes when they leave prison. Therefore, it is in the interests of public safety that rehabilitation of prisoners should be taken seriously. In the UK, participation in education opportunities is compulsory in some prisons. As many prisoners have left school with no basic qualifications, the focus is on basic literacy and numeracy skills. Once these basic skills have been addressed, they can take vocational training and courses like sewing, carpentry, IT, plumbing, and gardening. After these, if they want, they can go on to study for degrees by distance learning. Education and training get prisoners ready for jobs on the outside.

Prisoners are also encouraged to develop hobbies and do activities that will help express their creativity and improve their emotional health. Book groups, for example, are popular with prisoners. Every month they read and discuss a new book. Prisoners have said about book groups: 'It makes me feel like my opinions and ideas matter.' 'For an hour today I was not in prison; I was in a library and my thoughts were free.' Creative writing and arts and crafts courses are also popular, and sometimes prisoners discover hidden talents. Prison is a tough place, and activities like these can help make life in prison more bearable.

Prisoners can also work in prison, for example in the kitchen, the laundry, or the library, or even on a farm if there is one. There are some unusual and interesting jobs, such as translating books into Braille for blind children in developing countries or repairing and making watches and shoes. In some prisons, prisoners work as sales assistants selling products over the phone to customers. These jobs, although they aren't paid very well, help the prisoners to develop work skills and to gain valuable experience.
